Chapter 1 – Introduction

Chapter 1.1 Background Study

A country's culinary heritage has always been one of the attractive points of a country. Tourists, when travelling to another country, rate their overall experience in the country with food as one of the criteria. A decade ago, if a person wishes to taste another country's delicacy, they will have to travel there or buy outdated encyclopedia due to the immaturity of the Internet – there was a lack of attractive website that provides comprehensive information on cuisines.

However, in our interconnected modern era, this is no longer the case, it is much easier to gain information or knowledge of another country without having to travel; food enthusiasts can discover and learn about another country's cuisine from the tip of their fingers, and tourists can discover interesting information about another country via websites rather than relying on word of mouth. This change significantly boosts the need of a website dedicated to Malaysia Cuisine to further push our significance in the eyes of tourists.

Chapter 1.2 Target Audience

The website is targeted towards foreigners who are interested in knowing more about the unique Malaysian cuisines. This is not to say that the website isn't open to Malaysian visitors. Visitors of our websites are curious individuals who wish to expand their food encyclopedia and palette.

Chapter 1.3 Problem Description

Despite Malaysia's vast culinary heritage, there is a lack of comprehensive online resources that shows the breath and diversity of Malaysia's cuisine. Most websites only cover the Top Malaysia's Dish or Must Try Dishes in Malaysia!, which only focuses on food that are already well-known or specific foods with basic descriptions of the dishes, these websites have nothing else to offer. Moreover, existing websites mostly cover western cuisine such as French Cuisine or the European Cuisine with a lack of website dedicated to showcasing Malaysia Cuisine. Websites that do cover Malaysia cuisine, however, are blogs which neither interactive nor attractive.

Chapter 1.4 Significance

Our website follows minimalistic design that allows the content to be the focus and is easy to the eyes. This minimalistic design reduces the clutter on the page and prevents the user from being overwhelmed with information. It is also easy to navigate between webpages with interconnected buttons and links. If the visitors do not know where to start, they can head over to our dedicated recommended page to find out what others are enjoying. Our website also provides short descriptions of allergens, ingredients, and nutrients of the dish in attractive, interactive cards. With all these features, users will better understand Malaysian cuisine, its origins, and its uniqueness.

Since our website also features recommendations and news webpages, our website may help boost business of local restaurants by attracting tourists and foreigners and thus, drive culinary tourism. Finally, staying true to our beliefs, by becoming the hub for Malaysian cuisine, our platform will foster cross-cultural appreciation and understanding through the universal language of food.

Chapter 2 – Literature Review

2.1 HelloFresh

Website link: <https://www.hellofresh.com/>

Chapter 2.1.1 Introduction to HelloFresh

HelloFresh is a meal kit delivery service that prepares pre-portioned ingredients and recipes to customers to cook meals at home. This company aims to provide convenience to customers by allowing them to skip trips to grocery stores and avoid waiting in line. The company aims to simplify meal preparation by offering a variety of recipes each week that cater to different dietary preferences – vegans and vegetarians - and needs.

Chapter 2.1.2 Advantages

A. Clean and Modern Design

The website features minimalistic design with visually appealing colors as well as high-quality images of the meals and ingredients, making it visually appealing and helping users to choose their preferred dishes based on presentation. Each food is allowed to shine and is not overshadowed by ugly or blurry representations and the use of bright and clean colour palette contributes to overall user-friendly experience. This design approach helps reduce cognitive load for users and making it easy for users to focus on the contents.

B. Webpage Navigation

The navigation on HelloFresh is straightforward, with incredibly well-organised and descriptive menu that easily allows users to navigate sections, such as meal plans, recipes and account management, making it easy for users to find what they are looking for with minimal effort. This makes the website easily accessible especially to those who are not tech-savvy. Moreover, each webpage has consistent layout which further enhances usability, ensuring users fluidity when navigating the webpages.

C. Interactive Food Cards

HelloFresh food cards, when clicked on, provide a pop-up which provides more in-depth information about the food. This makes the browsing process more dynamic and enjoyable.

Chapter 2.1.3 Disadvantages

A. Mobile Experience

While the website is responsive, the mobile experience can sometimes be frustrating. The food cards, when tapped on, do not produce a pop-up, eliminating a significant feature that makes the website stand out. Moreover, users may encounter slow loading times, cluttered mobile interface, or difficulty accessing all features on smaller screens.

B. Animation and Transitions

While the website does provide a feeling of dynamic browsing experience, the lack of animation and transition attenuates that sensation. The pop just appears over the page with no animation with some transitions are simply too fast or instant.

C. Inadequate Feedback Mechanisms

The website provides limited feedback during user interactions, such as meal selection or subscription management. Users may not receive clear confirmation messages or visual cues, leading to uncertainty about whether their actions were successful. This can create frustration and diminish the overall user experience.

Chapter 2.1.4 Recommendations

The website would be significantly more appealing if they provide users with recommendation or informing the users on the top dishes of the month to guide the users and prevent the feeling of overwhelm when they browse the “Our menus” webpage. The website would also benefit from adding delay, or duration to its interactive element.

The website should also improve the mobile UI/UX by ensuring every element, such as images, buttons, cards and popups are responsive and correctly sized for different screen dimensions.

Chapter 2.1.5 Our webpage

Our website takes inspiration from the food cards system implemented by HelloFresh but with additional animation and transition rather than static popups. This provides a better feedback mechanism to the user and improves overall user engagements. We also added a filtering system which includes options such as all, rice, noodle, snacks, and sides to the food catalogue webpage which is lacking in HelloFresh’s “Our Menu” webpage.

Additionally, given the extensive diversity of Malaysia’s cuisine, we decided to dedicate separate webpages to the Peninsular Malaysia region and Borneo region. This approach allows users to find desired food in respective regions without having to sift through unrelated content. Users can also easily locate and explore the types of cuisine they are interested in, enhancing overall satisfaction and engagement with the website.

2.2 Madam Kwan's

Website link: <https://www.madamkwans.com.my/>

Chapter 2.2.1 Introduction to Madam Kwan's Website

Madam Kwan's is a Malaysian restaurant franchise that offers their most infamous Nasi Lemak and Nasi Bojari, which are delightful. As a famous restaurant, Madam Kwan's owns its trademark websites that represent its restaurant quality to the customer. Although the website is standard, it inspired us in our web development process regarding the simplicity, designs, and color selection, which play equally important roles in providing a good visual experience to the user.

Chapter 2.2.2 Advantages

A. Designs and Layout

Madam Kwan's website features simplistic and minimalistic designs that effectively utilize whitespace for small to large display sizes. This makes the content on the webpage look minimal and will not strain the user's eye. Each content segment is properly separated, and the content is always in the middle of each row. This reduces the concentrated content and makes it looser and more appealing simultaneously. Indirectly, this improves the user's focus span when viewing the content, as minimal yet interpretable content does not require much of user eye movement. This design strategy can help the webpage attain and retain user attention and focus when viewing the content.

B. Effective Colors Matching

Effective color matching and elegant yet simplistic designs were the best combinations to prevent the content from discomforting the user. Madam Kwan's website uses a clever combination of white, green, and golden colors to promote its content in a pleasing Malaysian traditional food environment. This is complemented by well-repeated yellow and green background patterns resembling the nostalgic Nasi Lemak theme.

Chapter 2.2.3 Disadvantages

A. Text Responsiveness

Madam Kwan's website is well-made for mobile responsiveness as it is a platform for placing food orders, reservations, and deliveries. However, when the website was open on a desktop screen, the text in the "About" and "Career" pages was small and decently legible. This is because the combination of Serif and small text will produce a cluttered text effect that makes users misinterpret easily. As a result, the user needs to use more energy or zoom in to read the text easily.

B. Important Feature Not Easily Accessible

After visiting the website more than 10 times, we noticed a few more navigations hidden in the footer that are linked to other Madam Kwan pages, such as "Corporate Order", "Franchise", "Feedback" and "Contact Us". However, options like "Feedback" and "Contact Us" are essential platforms for a restaurant to handle feedback and complaints effectively. This is because this platform was used to mitigate and settle complaints before the customer voices out to social media as an alternative source of complaints. So, we suggest that these important services should be made easily accessible by everyone to ensure they use the right channel for their purposes.

Chapter 2.2.4 Recommendations

Madam Kwan's website already appeals to its audience with its simple WOW elements. However, we would like to suggest some ways to extend the website's greatness. Firstly, we would recommend adding text responsiveness for the larger screen to ensure the text content is easily conveyed to the user. The serif face is still a suitable selection and must be maintained to create the traditional nostalgia effect.

Next, we suggest the webpage replace Madam Kwan's logo in the navigation bar with a more simplistic logo or just Madam Kwan's®. This is because the current logo subheading is pixelated and not readable from a computer display.

Chapter 2.2.5 Our webpage

Madam Kwan's website has inspired us greatly with its layout and designs. Therefore, we will pinpoint the significant part we will implement and improve in our web development process. The first inspiration is the color-matching strategy to match the simplicity and our Malaysian culinary theme. Therefore, we planned to use the combination of red and white to represent the prestige and passion of Malaysian Food.

Next, we will try to avoid the legibility issues due to responsiveness by making our website more minimalistic and maintaining legibility to ensure a good user experience in a hassle-free environment. Additionally, we would like to implement the animation used on Madam Kwan's website to improve the interactivity and visual appeal. This is because the scrolling animation is a simple yet effective way to engage the user in using the website with its smooth animation and transition.

2.3 Will Fly For Food

Website link: <https://www.willflyforfood.net/>

Chapter 2.3.1 Introduction to Will Fly For Food

Will Fly For Food was a food catalogue and blogging website that aimed to share the culinary experience with the audience by offering a clean design for mobile and computer displays regardless of advertisement. From its main page, the layout and design are simplistic, with less text, but contain more visual content than Madam Kwan's webpage. It is also displayed very well on small and big screens, conveying a minimalistic feeling.

Chapter 2.3.2 Advantages

A. Good Greeting

After entering the main page, we're first greeted by a minimalistic hero section with partnership logos before the content. This idea can be used to welcome the user to the webpage and engrave the first impression on the user of what to expect from the website. The hero section was responsive to different screen sizes and had a good view of the background. Additionally, the application of contrast between the text and background is good and legible to users of varying displays.

B. Appealing Catalogue

The main attraction of the webpage is the use of various colorful, high-quality, and appealing food and view images for its cataloging, which fit the minimalistic theme of the webpage. On the blog page, the ingenious use of varying types of pictures of the same food type was also applied to engage the user with appetizing food and induce a craving feeling. Therefore, we must select the most suitable images or visuals to influence the user's first impression.

Chapter 2.3.3 Disadvantages

A. No interaction engagement

The effective use of color and images is insufficient to preserve the user's focus span, as the web pages lack engaging and interactable visual content. For example, the content of blogs is usually lengthy, with a complement of images of many sizes. Therefore, when scrolling through the first quarter of the website's blog, the content quickly becomes dull and feels like reading a textbook full of text and static visual images.

B. Unappealing Recommendation Bar

A frustrating element when browsing the blog is the “Recommendation” bar that pops up at the top of the page, as shown in Figure 2.3.1. This bar contains the preview images and blog titles, which link the user to the pages. Although these may sound like convenient features, their placement is awkward and destroys the page's minimalism. Moreover, the placement of the bar is also distracting as it keeps popping in and out based on scroll movement when we want to view back the information above. Hopefully, this feature will only be shown on computer displays.

Chapter 2.3.4 Recommendations

The website developer has shown good color and image application to the website. Still, the lack of interaction has made the content and static visuals ineffective over a short period. Therefore, we suggest adding some animation and transitions, like hovering images to zoom in to make the website more interactive. This was a significant first step in tackling the issues since the layout was already finely designed.

Next, we suggest replacing the “Recommendation” bar on the right side of the page as a menu listing section with a “Recommendation” header or creating a new page for recommending content. When users need recommendations on what they should read, they can directly refer to the “Recommendation” page instead of seeing an unnecessary “Recommendation” bar at the top whenever the user browses the website.

Chapter 2.3.5 Our webpage

From Will Fly For Food’s website, we like the idea of implementing the hero section, but with the enhanced layout, design, and content by using video multimedia. We’ll ensure that we make the first impression on the users who visit our webpage for the first time. Moreover, this webpage teaches us what images and colors need to be chosen to attract the user’s attention, and with our implementation of animations, we are convinced that we’ll be able to make a better webpage in terms of interactivity.

Learning from the disadvantages of this webpage, we planned to implement the “Recommendation” section onto another page to let users decide their next steps instead of continue prompting them whatever they browse. In addition, the webpage also introduces the region selection for choosing the blog; therefore, this supports the idea in Chapter 2.1.5 of making two regions of Malaysia, which include West (Peninsular) and East (Borneo) Malaysia and decided to implement it.

Chapter 3 – Design

Our MALAYSIAN CUISINE webpage lets users explore the wonders of food in Malaysian culture, containing a unique blend of traditions, creating various unique dishes, desserts and snacks from the will of independence between Malay, Chinese, Indian, Sikh and others. This indirectly aligns with our theme, “The Luxury Paradise”, emphasizing the luxurious variation of food in our Golden Land to be explored. Therefore, the web pages use an informative format instead of the usual blog format to showcase the uniqueness of Malaysian cuisine effectively.

Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)

What makes Malaysian cuisine unique?

Malaysian cuisine is renowned for its vibrant flavors and diverse influences, reflecting the country's rich cultural tapestry. The fusion of Malay, Chinese, Indian, Thai, and Indonesian flavors creates a unique culinary experience. Ingredients like lemongrass, turmeric, and coconut milk are commonly used, and dishes often feature a balance of sweet, sour, spicy, and savory elements.

Where can I find authentic Malaysian cuisine?

Authentic Malaysian cuisine can be found in local Malaysian restaurants, food stalls, and markets, especially in areas with significant Malaysian communities. For an authentic experience, look for eateries that use traditional recipes and ingredients. Additionally, you can explore Malaysian food festivals and events, or even try cooking some dishes at home using recipes and ingredients from Malaysian grocery stores.

Are there vegetarian options in Malaysian cuisine?

Yes, Malaysian cuisine offers a variety of vegetarian options. Many dishes can be made vegetarian, and there are specific vegetarian dishes like Roti Canai (a type of flatbread), Vegetable Curry, and Nasi Goreng Kampung (a simple, fried rice dish with vegetables). Many traditional markets and restaurants also provide vegetarian versions of popular dishes.

The reason for this design choice is to provide convenience to the user. By utilizing the pop-up design, the user can quickly get the information they want without changing tabs and they can also quickly switch to another food. This, inadvertently, can prevent the feeling of frustration due to excessive page switching from forming.
